▲ WELL-SPOTTED

"Today there are only 7,500 cheetahs left, according to Cheetah Outreach, and South Africa is home to fewer than 1,000. Cheetah Outreach's staff told us the cats like to be stroked by visitors while they rest in the midday sun."

▲ TURQUOISE WATERS

"The Cape of Good Hope is the southwesternmost point of Africa, where the Atlantic meets the Indian Ocean. We skipped the line for the funicular and took an easy hike to the top of Cape Point, a stunning setting of rocky cliffs and deep-blue sea."

▲ STAR LIGHT

"The SunStar sculpture atop Signal Hill was designed by Christopher Swift using reclaimed materials to create a place of contemplation about sustainability and the future."

CAPE TOWN

LANDSCAPE DESIGNER FREDERICO AZEVEDO TRAVELED TO SOUTH AFRICA'S SECOND-LARGEST CITY WITH HIS TWO CHILDREN, LIVIA AND LORENZO, AND FRIEND ALEX COHEN, AND FOUND THE CITY AND ITS SURROUNDINGS TO BE THE PERFECT BLEND OF STUNNING SCENERY, ABUNDANT WILDLIFE AND SOPHISTICATED URBANITY.

▲ COLORFUL SCENE

"Livia and Lorenzo planned the afternoon hike between Hout Bay and the surfing beach at Muizenberg. Along the way, we took a chilly dip in the tidal pools at St. James, beside well-maintained, brightly painted beach cabanas."

▲ BIRD'S-EYE VIEW

"On the way to Cape Point, we stopped at an ostrich breeding farm. My kids loved the graceful birds, and the farm's Dutch architecture and tidy gardens were immaculate."

▲ PICTURE PERFECT

"Table Mountain, Lion's Head and the Twelve Apostles cliffs each were five minutes from the house we rented at Camps Bay Beach, and we could've spent the entire week hiking, to be rewarded for each climb by a vista more impressive than the last."

▲ BLACK, WHITE & BLUE

"The kids couldn't wait to get to Boulders Beach, where the adorable Jackass penguins contentedly congregate on the soft sand."
